ADMINISTRATIVE RESPONSIBILITIES

The employer is responsible for all administrative functions of the plan except for those assumed by the service provider(s) in your written agreement(s). Your service agreement with us spells out what functions AGFinancial will assume. A "No" response indicates that you need to take action to comply with regulations. These guidelines are for the employer's administrative use only; do not return to AGFinancial.

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

You are required to provide AGFinancial with an updated copy of your plan rules. All contributions received by AGFinancial are subject to the terms set forth in the Retirement Plan Contributions Acceptance Policy. Due to possible updates, we encourage you to use the online retirement contribution form or the most current contribution form available on our website.

¹ Church, QCCO, and NQCCO status should be reviewed periodically. If you are not a church or a church school, you should evaluate your status as a qualified church-controlled organization. If your status has changed to a nonqualified church-controlled organization, you will have additional responsibilities and should complete plan documentation that indicates your new status. If your status changes or is not determined correctly, there could be adverse tax consequences.

² Pre-tax and Roth deferrals must be made from taxable income.

³ You do not have to have a signed agreement if the employee is contributing due to a qualified automatic enrollment provision that is part of your written plan. As with all deferrals, eligible employees must be given an initial and annual opportunity to make changes to deferrals.

⁴ If you change from an exclusive service provider plan to a multiple service provider plan, then your continued use of MBA means that you are in agreement with the relevant section of AGFinancial's QCCO 403(b) Adoption and Service Agreement.
